

To censor new technology for the sake of old technology, stifles innovation and progress. I realize that some of the businessmen of old could care less about progress and innovation, and are more concerned about the big fat bank accounts, but if XM and Sirius are deprived of their ability to give news and traffic information to their subscribers, it would be the equivalent of shutting Fox News, CNN, and MSNBC down because the local broadcasters don't want these guys cutting into their business.

Free speech and new technology should not have to die so old businessmen with old technology can continue to make their seven figure salaries, without any competition.

Amanda Berry